Comparison of resources between the 1996 and 2012 editions

Edition	1996	2012
Historic Sites	16	61	45 more*
Historic Resources	20	34	14 more [†]
Documented Properties	71	72	44 more [‡]
Archeological Resources	0	15	15 more
Total Individual Properties	107	182	74 more
Historic Communities	14	19	5 more [§]
National Register Properties	1	6	5 more
National Register Districts	0	2	2 more

* The 45 new historic sites comprise 10 properties that were newly documented and were listed as historic sites as part of the 2010 Historic Sites and Districts Plan, 16 properties that were elevated from historic resource status, 15 properties that were elevated from their status as documented properties, and four properties that were already historic sites but were not included in the 1996 publication: the Edward T. Gross House Site (62-016), the Mitchellville Store Site (71B-007), Crauford Quarters (79-029) and the Sexton's House at St. Thomas' Rectory (86A-027-08). Archeological resources that are also historic sites are not included in this number.

† Of the original 20 historic resources, 16 were elevated to historic site status, 28 were elevated from their status as documented properties, four remained as historic resources, and two are new.

‡ Of the original publication's 70 documented properties, 42 had been elevated to historic site or historic resource status by 2011. This publication's 72 properties include 44 that are wholly new to it.

§ The five additional communities are Brookland and Ridgley, where the discovery of additional resources prompted their inclusion as communities; Little Washington and Lakeland, which were long-established communities but are newly documented here; and North Kenilworth, a vanished early suburb. Cedar Haven was grouped with Eagle Harbor in the previous publication.

Demolished Buildings

Resources by Type

The symbol ★ denotes a resource that is new to the 2012 edition. NR stands for National Register of Historic Places, HS stands for historic site, and HR stands for historic resource. If the designation of a property is new to this edition, the designation is shown in bold. Properties listed in the National Register of Historic Places are also historic sites; however, the National Register districts of Fairmount Heights and North Brentwood are not Prince George's County historic districts.
